Market Overview - RMB: Trade war tension with China data* by Benjamin Tin

Date & Time: 18th November 2019 10:30 SGT

China's yuan was set for its worst daily fall in nine months on May 13th 2019 as trade negotiations between the U.S. and China ended after President Donald Trump raised tariffs on Chinese goods. The yuan has fallen for six consecutive days and some analysts believe it will breach 7 per dollar in coming months, the level last seen during the global financial crisis. The world's two biggest economies appear deadlocked. Investors are watching to see how Chinese policymakers plan to offset the impact of the stiffer tariffs on both the economy and financial markets, analysts at Citi said. In this session, we will learn more on the market insight and outlook.

Goals: Market overview, CNY devaluation stages, drivers of RMB, PBOC easing trends, measures implemented, market indicators.
